Editorial

Dear Readers,

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you to the latest issue of the Journal of Interdisciplinary Dental Sciences (JIDS). This issue features carefully selected contributions that ensure quality, relevance, and academic value.

These articles aim to support both academic learning and clinical application. We hope they encourage thoughtful discussion, inspire further research, and assist practitioners in enhancing patient care through evidence-based approaches.

I sincerely thank the authors for choosing JIDS as a platform to share their scholarly work. Your commitment to advancing the field of dentistry is evident in the standard of your contributions. I also express my gratitude to our reviewers for their time and constructive feedback. Their careful evaluation has been essential in maintaining the scientific quality and integrity of this issue.

To our readers, thank you for your continued interest and support. Your engagement motivates us to uphold high academic standards and strive for continuous improvement. We encourage you to share your thoughts and reflections on the articles presented in this issue. Together, we can continue to build a strong academic community dedicated to the advancement of dental sciences.